

A SYSTEM AND METHOD FOR RECRUITING EMPLOYEES

Abstract of the Disclosure

Efficient operation of an intermediate enterprise is achieved by disclosing, at all times, jobs for which employees are requested and the application status of applicants for those jobs. A network-connected server provides information in response to accesses by member clients via the network. The server includes: a job offer information database for storing job offer information that is managed for each job; an application acceptance unit for accepting applications from client terminals for jobs included in the job offer information; and a job offer information/application status generating unit for presenting to a new applicant not only the job offer information but also information concerning previous applicants who applied for each job included in the job offer information.